Keep Connected during the Postal Disruption

Good afternoon, Friend in Christ

As you are likely aware, Canada Post and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers are embroiled in a labour dispute which may lead soon to a lockout or strike. The Western Catholic Reporter, which depends on Canada Post for delivery, has therefore decided not to publish our regular print edition dated July 11 or any other print edition for the duration of the lockout or strike.

However, you can access the digital edition of the WCR free of charge during the disruption to postal delivery by visiting the WCR website or directly right now by clicking on this link.

As well, the WCR will extend the subscriptions of paid subscribers by the number of issues not published during the labour dispute.

Parishes that regularly receive bundles will not be billed for the issues we don't print, or if they have paid in advance, we will extend their subscription by the number of issues not mailed.

When the threat of work stoppage is over, we will publish a special print edition with all the local news as well as major national and international stories from the time during the lockout/strike.

The WCR website – www.wcr.ab.ca – also will be regularly updated during the lockout/strike.

We are sorry for any inconvenience this causes you, and we look forward to restoring all of our regular services.
